Hepatitis B: A systematic review of the policy and service literature. A number of EU countries recommend screening for hepatitis B (HB) for people on at-risk registers and for low- and medium-risk groups at various intervals. There is limited evaluation of the effectiveness of this screening in terms of clinical outcomes and effectiveness. To assess the policy, guidelines and service literature related to HB screening in terms of prevention, treatment and outcomes. A systematic literature search was undertaken. Articles were selected if they were published in English in the period 1987-2015 in peer-reviewed journals or if they were systematic reviews of published literature. The quality of the study was assessed using Cochrane recommendations. The level of evidence was assessed using GRADE. Twenty-nine articles (four systematic reviews, six guidelines, 17 service evaluations) met inclusion criteria. All stated that screening should be universal and recommended a variety of risk screening intervals.

Evidence for the effectiveness of universal screening was limited. Evidence for the effectiveness of risk screening was more widely available. The effectiveness of universal screening was variable, depending on the target population, age, prior vaccination and risk status, and the time period over which it was implemented. Universal screening resulted in up to a 0.4-0.9% increase in uptake of hepatitis B immunisation in Sweden. These figures were much greater in people at high risk. Routine universal screening is not recommended to increase vaccine uptake. More research is required on the effectiveness of risk-based screening. Greece–Italy relations

Greece–Italy relations, bilateral ties between Greece and Italy have been cordial. Diplomatic ties between Greece and Italy began with the entry of Italy into World War II. The modern era began when Italy established diplomatic relations with the Kingdom of Greece (since 1922) and the Kingdom of Italy (until 1946). History Kingdom of Greece in Italy In 1866, the United Greek States asked the Italian government for support in the war against the Ottoman Empire, which had invaded their lands; Italy took an active part in Greek activities in the Balkan Wars. In January 1886, an Italian delegation was sent to Athens to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Italian conquest of the isle of Peloponnese. In the same year, Italy officially recognized
