The latest version of PrintShop Mail 6.Wanna-be Kenyans can now find ways to buy Kenyan things that are cheaper and of better quality than those at home. Thousands of Kenyans have embraced the trend of shopping online with the new Kenyan online shopping platform M-Shop. Created by Makerere University's Business School, the platform has just won a commendation for its pioneering efforts in driving Kenyan online shopping. The platform aims at creating a one-stop-shop for Kenyan Internet users to buy Kenyan products online, while keeping the cost low. According to M-Shop's chief executive Imelda Jide, the platform also targets the ongoing and growing number of Kenyans who are going through a period of transformation in their lifestyle and are looking to make life more convenient by shopping online. Jide said the platform is not only meant to provide access to quality products from local manufacturers, it also aims to educate people about quality issues in the country and help them save on prices. "It's our duty to educate Kenyans about quality issues in the country and also provide access to brands and products from local manufacturers. We want to be a platform that makes life easier for the average Kenyan," she said. She said M-Shop would be able to curate the products its users want to purchase. "Our main goal is to educate the Kenyan consumer about quality issues in the country, and to help them save on prices. You will get what you want," she said. Quality standards at the platform are determined based on: The level of care taken in manufacturing
