David Cameron has already conceded defeat to Ed Miliband, as the new Labour leader heads for 10 Downing Street. The prospect of a Lib Dem revival in Scotland has faded with Nick Clegg's disastrous week of polling in the party's heartlands, although it remains possible that the fall-out from unpopular budget cuts could prove to be more damaging than anything Mr Cameron can do to him. Download the new Independent Premium app Sharing the full story, not just the headlines Nick Clegg, who has been fielding a David Cameron attack line against Labour's leader, Ed Miliband, seemed dismayed on Tuesday night that the polls had not swung back in his favour, at a loss for words, before closing his eyes and turning to Mr Miliband to say 'Oh dear'. The latest Scottish polls, published on Tuesday evening, show the gap between Labour and the Conservatives narrowing in Scotland. The first two polls suggest that Ed Balls' decision to announce a fresh round of cuts in his party's conference in Manchester has worked as the party is up 14 to 16 in Scotland. But the General Election 2010 special put Labour five points up, amid a general malaise in the party's south-east heartlands.

The Palais is Sydney's "opulent" Grand Ballroom, seating 477. After a short intermission of tea and delicious mince pies, a few speeches and a slightly shaky solo dance performance by the leader of the National Youth Choir from 11am to 2pm (minimal drinks consumed), it was time to dive into the menu. Potted gazpacho, meatballs, croquettes, creams and meringues were all lovingly

Yes, it's a puzzle adventure game and most of the time you're observing your characters personality, how they interact with objects. The first thing you're shown when you select the "play" option is a hand-drawn map showing you where you're going9.3/10 All Upcoming Games If there's one thing that Zed does well in my opinion, it's setting up a detailed world where everything is connected and you can tell all about the backstory. This game hits this head on and leaves the audience wanting to know more9.1/10 GameSpot This is one of those games that gets better with some level of familiarity. When I first started playing, I found the story a bit predictable, and the jump from point A to B to C to A was slow and very linear. But like most things in life, the experience grows with knowledge, which Zed definitely delivers on. It's an interesting concept that may not have seen the light of day otherwise; the cast is good and the graphics are awesome. After you've played through Zed, you'll want to play around with the little circles and you'll learn to appreciate every bit of the game9.0/10 Rock, Paper, Shotgun Zed is a puzzle adventure game with art, music, and personality. It isn't trying to tell a story. The idea is basically to follow your characters as they drive along the road, race across it, drive through it or crash through it, and interact with various objects. It's sort of like The Sims meets Monkey Island, a game with a very particular vibe. The premise is clever, the characters are likable, and the atmosphere is inviting, making Zed a great little game to play when you need a break from work. 11.2/12 Gamespot Zed the game has fun puzzles that are light on the "need to figure out the riddle" and heavy on the "seeing what happens if you do" and in my experience these types of things never get old for me because they're just so much fun to play with. The good puzzles are varied, so there's always new things to learn as I progress through the game. Like most good puzzlers, Zed has a clever structure and provides interesting solutions to many simple, but imaginative puzzles. 10/10 Destructoid It's an interactive song game with a somewhat interesting concept, but on the whole I never found it all that difficult to figure out. It's not that I couldn't figure things

(Originally published on December 1, 2014; this story was cross posted to the Huntsville(TX) Business Directory on Dec. 9) What? A "Best of the Best" Choosing All Stars? Heck, not for me. What the hell is a "Best of the Best"….and who – me? For heaven's sake, I'm just an office clerk at the Chinese Laundromat, when I'm not babysitting my favorite Great Dane. I can't sing or dance or act. I'll be honest, the only thing I enjoy doing is watching the news on TV. It's a dynamite mess, but what else is there? Anyway, for the last 15 years or so I've been fortunate, along with my family and a few thousand of my closest friends, to have become very, very well-acquainted with a certain country up north – Canada. In school we were told that a mutt wasn't a "real" dog, but many of us welcomed the challenges and made our family come in true. My attempts at raising pedigree puppies were a bit disappointing when I learned that my average old dog I procured from a foolhardy soul when I was nine years old turned out to be a mutt. My esteemed dog dying from the common complications of severe mid-age brought us all to tears and reminded us of how we had accomplished so much – we were one step closer to being successful at accomplishing our lifelong goals. But, when I learned that we were going to have a healthy mutt at the end of the year, I thought…damn, it's home. Perhaps we'll only get one mutt next year. But, he'll be hairy, and a good dog, and we'll be so proud that he's a mutt. Oh, it was sad how my family reacted and how much we loved each other.

So…maybe my time with Great Dane is over. Except, and I must admit, I couldn't help looking forward to a coming adventure. It had nothing to do with a mutt at all. Donna and I had just had our infant daughter a few months back. We had named her Annika, after my late brother. And, with this positive outlook, I had still entertained the

Welcome to a new and original adventure that merges the classic children's book with classic point and click adventure games into a single complete experience. The world of A Pixel Story is based on the world of a simple English children's book of the 70's, the land of the living books, where there's the rabbit Hole with the writers and the wolf, the gryffindor's house and the barrett's cottage. But the land was there long before the book and it is going to be there long after the book. With great art by George Gorham and a charming graphics by Kim Townsend, this is a world, a place, that you will fall in love with. A place that will stay with you after you have finished it, as a sort of warm nursery for your imagination. A few hours playing the game will pass by and you will have discovered a curious world in which nothing is what it seems at first. A Pixel Story brings you a new kind of adventure, a story that through its narrative elements, through its fresh characters, through its unique world design, and through its emotional and humoristic core, promises to offer you a complete experience. A story of which you do not tire in any moment, which will keep you playing the game for a long time. Features: - Story about a game - A world of books - 8 characters/questions to answer - 2 endings - PS3 & PS4 version - A New Story for your imagination and your time Install Notes: Run the game on your PS3 and follow the on-screen instructions. The PS4 version has been tested and is fully playable. You are welcome to send me detailed bug reports or feature requests at Recommended for you Hey everyone! My name is Flavio and I'm part of the AE team. About the game: A Pixel Story is a magical project created by two aspiring game developers to fill a gap in the market and provide the passionate gamers out there with a good experience. We have created A Pixel Story in order to write a story through a series of questions that if answered properly will lead you through an interactive experience. In the end, A Pixel Story will be a visually stunning and emotional journey that will leave you with a smile on your face. You will

Suppose a website has n links. Lister simply has O(n) to list all its links. What if we wish to keep track of which link they came from, so that we might take advantage of the prior linking behaviour when showing some page? That's what lister-string does, it tracks the prologue of each link, either as text or as data: But what if we notice that this code is starting to get very unwieldy (at least for n>10). What we really want to do is: It doesn't take that long a time to do (if you don't care about ensuring the same order within the same link), but it seems like there's room for improvement. Specifically, this commit tries to make the problem closer to first arrival for which we know the problem is NP-complete. Challenge You must implement the string_list, that can be done in O(log n) time, but can take up at least O(n) space, but O(log n) time to add (i.e. also do all those linked lists that we erased from this).PHOTOS: Is This the Winner for Best Picture? From Oscars, to Oscars. For the third year in a row there were no speeches, but that didn't stop the most competitive year yet for this year's Best Picture award. A lot of voters love to talk about their Oscars experiences and now it seems as though you can now post your photo or video of accepting your Golden Globe. Some of the best videos and photos are posted on the "Oscars 2014: Golden Globe fans in their own words" Facebook page, so take a look and see what videos and photos captivate you the most. After watching the video, take a look at the slideshow below for a look at all the best pictures and videos posted from one of the best days ever. When the nominations for this year's Golden Globes were announced there was a bit of a guessing game to see
